

Financial Literacy Statistics

46% of Canadians were targeted for financial information through phishing or hacking.

49% of people with low incomes in Canada carry debt, and those who do spend an average of 31% of their income on debt payments.

12.5% (almost 800,000) of lower-income households experienced difficulties in accessing financial help programs or services (compared to 7% of households overall).

4 in 10 Canadians (40%) say that money is what tends to cause them the most stress in their lives.

People who have higher levels of financial confidence tend to have better results with day-to-day money and debt management than those with low levels of confidence.